

NEW SOUTH SHORE DEPOT TO OCCUPY SHERIDAN OFFICE

Secures Lease of Hotel Lobby and Barber Shop and Option
on Building for Interurban Terminal Station.

After 74 years of continued service on the ground floor, at the corner of N. Michigan and Lasalle sts., the Sheridan hotel, with the exception of the dining room, is to move upstairs, and the present lobby office and barber shop, is to become the terminal station of the Chicago, Lake Shore & South Bend Railway Co., after May 15.

A lease of the ground floor, with the exception of the barroom and the dining hall, for one year, with the privilege of two, with an option for the purchase of the entire hotel building, south to about the center of the dining hall, has been secured from Mrs. Adele Bickford, proprietor of the hotel. Remodeling is to begin at once.

Property to the south of the hotel proper, owned by other parties, used for the hotel to about the center of the dining room, is to be abandoned as to that purpose, and a dividing wall reconstructed, separating the buildings. The north half of the dining room will continue its connection with the hotel, serving also for a terminal restaurant and lunch room with the office upstairs.

That the Northern Indiana will also use the Sheridan for a city waiting room and interurban station, in conjunction with the South Shore, was denied by Charles E. Enmons, general manager of the Northern Indiana Saturday. All negotiations looking to a union station for the two companies, were broken off some time ago, according to Enmons, since it developed that an amalgamation of western service could not be made.

The present Northern Indiana station at Washington and Michigan, is to be retained, though it is admitted that at the time the Lasalle bridge franchise was secured, and the double tracks laid on Main and Lasalle sts., forming a new loop, that would make Michigan a through route available to both roads for depot purposes, a union station was in the minds of the officials of both roads.

Promises of the South Shore officials made to the board of safety, to relieve the congestion on Main st., at once, by stationing waiting cars on Colfax av., coupled with the suggestion that Main st. and the present waiting room will be abandoned entirely by the middle of May, preceded the story from Michigan City Friday that the Sheridan hotel is the place to be utilized.

It was rumored some weeks ago that an option had been secured on the Lantz coal yard property diagonally across Michigan and Lasalle to the northeast, with the view of building a station there, but it now appears to have fallen through. Whether negotiations for the hotel property have been going on for any considerable time, is uncertain, but the view of the southerly part of the dining room, for which a lease was held by Mrs. Bickford, consented to release her only a few days ago.

This release appears to have been necessary, together with an understanding as to who should build the dividing wall, and how, before the site could be definitely decided upon. It is also understood that the South Shore has secured an option on a small patch of ground immediately to the southwest of the Sheridan building, that will enable the company to square the building, the new room to be constructed on the ground to constitute a part of an express store room.

Hotel Has a History.
The Sheridan hotel, originally The Exchange, was built by William L. Earl in 1846.

Water st. when the Exchange hotel was built, then in the very heart of the city—which was only a village. On the northeast corner of the same streets, at that time, now the hotel, was the site of an Indian trading post of the American Fur Co., with Alexis Coquillard in charge. He called it the "Big St. Joseph Station" and it was said that had the South Shore secured this property that name would have been resurrected.

At this point too was the first ferry across the St. Joseph, running very closely along the line of the Lasalle st. bridge. The hotel then was quite in the very center of things. After several years Earl, the builder, sold the place and the site was sold to the Gibbs house, and later as the Dwight house. Dwight Deming, Samuel Ragan, Capt. Mills, Jeremiah H. Knight, George Horn, William Mason, John E. Kirby and Ed. Bickford then the latter's widow, have successively owned and run the place.

It was Samuel Ragan, about 1869, who gave the hotel the name Sheridan house, in honor of Gen. Sheridan, of civil war fame. Repairs and improvements later brought it the name New Sheridan, but since the coming of the Oliver the "New" has been gradually forgotten.

Bird Bickford came into possession of the property in 1895.

PLACES HEAD ON RAIL AS TRAIN APPROACHES

Engineer of Lake Shore Passenger Says Man Deliberately Ended His Life—Think He Came From Detroit.

A man believed to be Henry De Prey, a Belgian from Detroit, calmly walked onto the Lake Shore tracks a quarter of a mile west of Winkler's factory, at 5:30 o'clock yesterday evening, in his head across a rail and waited for the fast east bound passenger No. 14 to bear down upon him and cut it off. That it was a deliberate suicide was the statement of the engineer of the train to Coroner Swantz.

The engineer said he saw the man suddenly walk on the track when only a few hundred feet away from the oncoming train, prostrate himself and place his head across a rail. Before the engineer could bring his speeding train to a stop it had ground its way over the man, neatly severing his head.

Coroner Swantz was immediately called and arrived before the body had been moved. No marks were on it. The head had been carried about 20 feet from the body. The body was unmoved, flat on the ground with arms stretched straight down the side.

From letters found in the man's pocket it is believed that his name is Henry De Prey of Detroit, and that he has a brother residing at 45th and Auburn sts. in Detroit, and also a sister. No money was found on him. His dress and general appearance did not indicate a man of means.

The body was removed to Yerrick's morgue, where it will be held pending a notification of possible relatives at Detroit. Coroner Swantz will hold an inquest Monday.

TAKE MEN BACK TO SANDUSKY FOR TRIAL

Suspects in Murder Case Return to Ohio Without Fighting Extradition.

Charles "Baltimore Red" Kelly, alias Harry Young, alias George Thompson, aged 23, and Charles Miller Saturday morning were started with officers for Sandusky, O., where they will be tried for the murder of Moses Price, a Lake Shore detective.

The two men in the company of two others, John Barr and John Becker, were picked up at the Lake Shore depot early this week and have been from Sandusky. It is alleged that Kelly, a notorious car robber, shot Price, the detective, in order to escape capture when an attempt was made by the officer to arrest him.

When the Sandusky officers arrived both men agreed not to fight the case by compelling the officers to file proceedings in the circuit court to prove their identity.

The men have been in custody here since Tuesday night. Both refused to say anything of the charges and neither will tell where he was at the time the detective was shot.

Becker and Barr, who were arraigned in police court charged with vagrancy, are still being held, police believing that they are wanted in eastern cities. Trial of the vagrancy charge will not be until next week, which will give the police a chance to investigate before they are released.
